His Course in a Letter to the President.

Ends the Controversy by Rescinding his Orders.

Special Telegram.

WASHINGTON, November 15.—Land Commissioner Sparks this afternoon gave to the press his reply to the attack made upon him by Secretary Lamar in his letter to the President, dated October 1, 1887, in the case of the Secretary vs. the Union Pacific railroad company, involving the authority which they each claimed to direct the issuance of patents for lands granted to the company by the Pacific railroad acts. The letter of Commissioner Sparks is as follows:

GENERAL LAND OFFICE, WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 15, 1887.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a letter addressed to you by the secretary of the interior, dated October 1, 1887, in which he criticises my action in the case of the Union Pacific railroad company vs. Dodge, involving the question of the right of the secretary of the interior to direct the issuance of patents for lands granted by the Pacific railroad acts, and also my action in the case of the Omaha & Northwestern railroad company vs. Moody, involving the question of the right of the secretary of the interior to withdraw lands from the operation of the grants. Previous to the receipt of the letter referred to, I had addressed you a letter in which I had requested you to call upon the attorney general for his opinion upon the questions involved in the controversy between the secretary and myself, and to request that you would withhold your decision in the Omaha cases until such opinion was received. I had also requested you to withhold your decision in the case of Moody vs. the Omaha & Northwestern railroad company, pending the receipt of the opinion of the attorney general. I had made these requests because I had been informed that you had been advised by the attorney general that the decisions rendered by the secretary of the interior in the Dodge and Moody cases were not approved by the law officer of the department, and because I had been informed that you had been advised by the attorney general that the decisions rendered by me in the Omaha cases were not approved by the law officer of the department, and because I had been informed that you had been advised by the attorney general that the decisions rendered by me in the Omaha cases were not approved by the law officer of the department. The receipt of your letter of October 1, 1887, made it necessary that I should take some action in the premises, and I therefore, on October 3, 1887, rendered decisions in the Omaha cases, which were intended to carry out the views of the secretary of the interior as expressed in his letter of October 1, 1887. I also, on October 3, 1887, rendered decisions in the cases of Moody vs. the Omaha & Northwestern railroad company, which were intended to carry out the views of the secretary of the interior as expressed in his letter of October 1, 1887. I also, on October 3, 1887, rendered decisions in the cases of Dodge vs. the Union Pacific

JOB WORK.

We are glad to announce that the concert given by the Woman's Art society have had an unusually good sale. The tickets that have been sold can be exchanged for reserved seats that morning. Those who cannot go should buy the tickets to help a worthy charity for, as has been stated all the money received from the sale of the tickets goes into the treasury of the society.

Mr. Balfour has ordered the arrest of M. Dorsline Pyne member of parliament, for one of his speeches on the coercion act. Mr. Pyne does not propose to be arrested. He has retired to his castle and fortified himself. His castle has a wall fifteen feet thick and cannot be reduced except by artillery. He has provisioned his castle and thinks he will be able to hold out until parliament meets.

The official count showed that Isaac Brinker, the democratic candidate for assessor in Arapahoe county was elected by a plurality of twenty-four. The result is a great compliment to Mr Brinker. He has been assessor of Arapahoe county for two years. He did his work so honestly and faithfully and is withal a man of such pure and public spirited life, that a great many republicans voted for him. The selection is not a selection on Mr. Hagar, the republican candidate against him but it is rather a great compliment to Mr. Brinker.

That grand old Roman ex-Senator Thurman, was a little angry just after the election in Ohio, and among other things said the following: "I venture to say that Joseph B. Foraker—if that is his name I venture to say that that man has been doing more for the last three months to make disunion, to separate this great republic, than all the utterances that all the Jacksons that ever were that name made." He was somewhat misunderstood, and has written a letter, explaining this speech, in which he condemned the doctrine of secession in a very forcible manner. But the explanation was hardly necessary. What he intended was very plain and in the opinion of a good many loyal people is very just. When one man whips another in a good cause, he ought to show a little magnanimity. But if he keeps taunting the unfortunate one and boasting over his victory, he is not much better than the man who is whipped, who boasts of the wrong-doing which brought on the fight. The effort to raise a sectional issue is more than unpardonable. It is cowardly and mean.

The republicans are attributing their defeat quite largely to the liquor dealers working almost exclusively for the democratic ticket. The republican party would not have had greater opposition if it had adopted resolutions in favor of the most stringent liquor legislation. The liquor men are wise in their day and generation, and usually make their votes count on election day. But still, the democratic ticket would have been defeated, and the prohibitionists voted solidly for the republican ticket. The prohibitionists are not wise in their day and generation, and usually vote so as to hurt their friends and help their enemies. Some arguments for this position put on the republican party itself. The majority of the republican convention was in favor of a liquor option law for the whole state, giving each community the right to choose between prohibition and license. It was also in favor of a high license law with severe restrictions for those cities which should vote for it. This is in preference to total prohibition, which could not carry in New York, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Troy, Rochester and some other large cities. Even Denver, going by the record, would not choose to express itself in favor of the platform, but to adopt a general resolution which did not commit itself to anything. The result was that the party had the appearance of both the prohibitionist and saloon element. If there is a moral to this it is "be honest and speak out your convictions." It is now pretty certain that Mr. Hagar also was not elected. If Mr. Brinker could have taken the party vote, he would have had much stronger majority. Mr. Hagar's objection to Senator Cooper's election of the republican state central committee of Pennsylvania, has the following history:

The republican state committee of the state is altogether gratifying and of the very best character. Before the public accepts the charge that Senator Cooper, who has been for many years a leading spirit in the Pennsylvania politics, and if the same kind of methods are good in New York as well as in Pennsylvania.

Stories in the New York Tribune connected with the contest in the Eighth district, between Ward and Savage. The report is very brief, but it is evident that the latter will be the successful candidate. The democrats will have a majority of one in the house, and if the election of Savage will give them a majority of two. The republicans will have an opportunity to show their strength in the next house.
